The North got the sub- for their home; and it is a fibel upon the people stance, and the South only the shadow.

We quote the following from the Pittsburg Gazette, we believe the oldest whig paper in Penn-sylvania, certainly one of the most influential, to zette, we believe the oldest whig paper in l'enuof editors and politicians at the North:

Treastly of further legislation to guard against the ceasion of the leading federal members, including one of their late candidates for Governor, bowks on the orthan, not impaint their efficacy. Such are the leading federal members, including one of their late candidates for Governor, strenuously opposed the amendment in question, while Gran. Pierce and all other leading democratic members, including one of their late candidates for Governor, strenuously opposed the amendment in question, while Gran. Pierce and all other leading democratic members, including one of their late candidates for Governor, strenuously opposed the amendment in question, while Gran. We find the following in the Albany Argus of the 26th of June:

view of Gen. Scott's prospects. Premising that they have sought to deceive. the delegates of States which will have no whig votes to give, and with little regard to the preference of States whose support is indispensable to

"It will be observed, on reference to the lable which we have presented, that the 159 votes given on the last ballot for Gen. Scott, were from 20 different States. From 14 of these States, including the four largest States in the Union, the majority of votes was in favor of Scott, he having received 147 votes from those States. Of election, seven for Cass, and one. Californio. was not in existence. Ten of these fourteen States, by the test of the latest State elections, namely, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Pennsylva nia, Ohio, Indiana, Illin is, Michigan, Virginia course cannot be expected to aid in the election

"Vermont is a whig State, and Rhode Island, New York, and Delaware, although the last general elections in each went in favor of the democratic party, may, perhaps, be fairly set down as doubt? I—the partise being so nearly divided that neither party is likely to yield without a vigorous cont. cont, d, the result of which must depend in some consocrable degree on the relative personal pop ularly of the candidates, and the impresmay prevail of their respective positions in referee to the compromise question. If in addition to the five votes of Vermont, we assume in favor of Gen. Scott all the votes of the three above named doubtful States, we obtain in the 14 States which have given us a whig candidate. I nossibility, 47 votes in aid of his election. W are sorry it is not in our power to say that such an event is probable.

The twelve remaining votes given for General Scott in the convention were from the six following States: Massachusetts, Connecticul, Tennessee, Wisconsin. Iowa, and Missonri. Of these States, which have 49 electoral votes in all, the last three gave their votes for Gen Cass at the last three gave their votes for Gen. Cass at the last presidential election, and neither of them, we believe, has ever given a whig majority in a gen-eral election on any occasion. Missouri, how-ever, if satisfied with the nomination, might have been relied on with great confidence in the coming election for a whig majority, as we believe Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Tennessee might have been. We must say, that in support of the present nomination, made in opposition to the expressed sentiment of the whigs of these States, in our opinion a whig majority can be sentiment. in our opinion a whig majority cannot be relied on in any one of them. But we will suppose it possible, and we add the 40 votes of these four States which participated in the nomination to the foregoing 47 doubtful votes, and we have 87 votes to hope for, not half of which can be relied ou.

"In addition to the States above named there are eleven States whose votes in convention were unanimous against Gen. Scott on the last ballot, and we believe on all the others. These eleven Stales gave 80 votes against Gen Scott, and they are entitled to the same number of electors. Six of those States, now entitled to 48 votes, gave their support in the last election to Gen. Taylor, and the five others gave their 32 votes for General Cass. What probability there is that the six States which voted for Gen. Taylor in 1848, but whose delegates have now unanimously voted against Gen. Scott, and all of which, in popular assemblies, have declared their preference to another candidate, will support the whig nomination, we leave to others to judge for themselves. Our opinion, founded on the declarations of conventions and the public journals of those States, is that very little reliance is to be placed, in this election, on support from that quarter. These opinions will have no influence on the result, and ve shall be gratified to find them crroneous, if they should prove to be so."

The convention made a great number of an entile new one, in fact. Changes of a very important character, relating to the basis of representation, the judiciary, &c., &c , which the people never expected, were made. These, and the great length and expense of the session, rendered the convention rather unpopular, and the opposition press seized upon these facts to prejudice the convention and its doings, in the minds of the people, holding the demo-cratic party responsible for the whole. The consequence was that when the amendments were submitted to the people, thus prejudiced against them and their authors, in advance, the whole were rejected together. They were acted ters engrossed the minds of the people, and not much more than half the voters of the State voted upon them.

Concurring fully in the principles of the sindured opposition to this test. Everybody admits that no expression of their sentiments upon the merits of the question under consider tion, has yet been obtained. The vote in most towns was taken at the close of an exciting political contest, and after the principal business of interest to the mass of voters had been of new Hampshire to represent this as a delife for their home; and it is a libel upon the people of New Hampshire to represent this as a delife rate expression of their views upon the great question of religious freedem and equality.

Something has been said in the papers in regard to the degree of responsibility which allianches to the two parties for this result. All the principal cities and I was throughout the Eastern, would not drive from us naturalized citizens, with us in feeling and interest.

> [Fer the Louisville Democrat.] THE BULL AND THE LOCOMOTIVE,

In a sort of moody madness Roamed he o'er the grassy plain-Tossed his hushy tall and mane. Was he yet the meadow's monarch-Of the pasture still the king And he raised his head so lordly-Gave his tail a wider swing.

Was he not acknowledged chieftai Of the borned droves of cattle Was he not the tried and trusted In each bovine field of battle? Was he not the loved and chosen Of the milch-kine's fairest queen Was he not the admiration

Of each bull-calf on the green If was true, and well be knew it; Who his claim would dare dispute Dearly, dearly should be rue i Be he long or snort-horned brule. Who, with breath of smoke and flame,

Through the meadows rushing came frue, th' intruder's limbs were weighly, And he seemed a thing of might; True, he might be very dangerous If he shewed a wish to fight. But he blowed too much and loudly To be willing for a lark, And the bull repeated proudly:

"Biting dogs do never bark; "And I swear by fair Europa, When the stranger comes again-Rushing through the verdant pasture, Steaming wild across the plainl will call my herd to hattle, Boldly cross the monster's track-

Either we shall be g ne cattle, Or we'll drive him, frighten'd, back!" See! afar the locomotive Whirling o'er the fragrant mead, And he nears the very meadow Where, beneath the gallant lead

Of their monarch true and valiant, Stand the tawny horned crowd; Nought he heed them, but the hell rings, And he whistles very lond. From his peni up breast escaping,

Shrieked the steam-a dismal cough; Frightered was the herd of bu'locks, And they madly scampered off-All hut one, and he, courageous, Naught bul death can force to yield; ile will conquer, or, as beef-meat,

You shall hear him from the field. There he slands, and wails the coming Of his fie, who draweth near; Roars he with triumphant fury, From a breast that knows no fear. Sticks he down his noble frontiet, With considerable vim-

Butt 1 he takes the locomotive, Buit I the locomotive him. Need I tell who most alld suffer?-Need I apeak the bullock's fate? Widowed cowa, with ceaseless lowing, Will the horrid tale relate.

In the fishing of the lightning— In the twinkling of a thought— He, the thier of cow affections,

By the cow-catcher was caught. Sat a farmer on the rail-car, Saw the bullock'a fatal stroke-Saw him fall across the alcepers, Knew his gallani neck was broke; Saw his form in fragments lying—ly and innocently without producing any injurious efects or consequence, which cannot be said of all medicines.

At this season of the year, when attacks of the Diarr hom and Bowel Complaint are so prevaient, thus article can hardly be too much used. It prevents as well as cures diseases of this kind.

Totreveler's and those exposed to changes of climate and water, this reme y is especial : accommended. It counteracts to a great extent the bjurious effects of had water, as well as undie exposure to bear and dampness. A few doses of this medicine will prevent attacks of disease, avert lingering I liness and perhaps orath.

Auch difference exists in the quality of the root obtained from different parts of the world, some samples containing comparatively but little strength.
